Ex-Lieutenant-Governor Says Girl Was Hounded in Name of the Law.

SISTER IS A WITNESS

SISTER IS A WITNESS

The defence of Rae Tanzer, on trial for perjury in having identified James W. Osborne as Oliver Osborne, was begun yesterday in the United States District Court before Judge Wolverton. Ex-Lieut.-Gov. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler addressed the jury and Dora Tanzer, one of Rae's sisters, was a witness.

Mr. Chanler said the defence would show by the testimony of experts that the letter ascribed to Oliver Osborne must have been written by James W. Osborne. He said that Harold Spelman, former attorney for Rae Tanzer, had told her that United States Attorney Marshall was not going to let any harm befall James W. Osborne, his friend and the Mr. Marshall had the power of the Government back of him. Mr. Chanler said that this was one reason why Rae Tanzer so changed her testimony that she was indicted for perjury.

"Miss Tanzer was hounded wherever she went," Mr. Chanler declared. "The police were everywhere. The courts were and this worked on her mind. She belongs to the simple class of hardworking girls who struggle for an honor."

The lawyer said that Miss Tanzer told her to inform that James W. Osborne's appearance differed in some way when he was on and off the witness stand. She went to Spielberg's home, and a few minutes in the morning, after a night of persuasion, he was able to telephone Mrs. James W. Osborne that the young woman admitted that James W. Osborne was the father of her child.

"The next thing she knew," Mr. Chayler continued, referring to his client, "Spielberg went before the grand jury and told her story. He said that she would not come out was revealed. The indictment of the hotel clerk Safford, who was charged with having had an affair with James W. Osborne, followed.

Dora Tanzer said James W. Osborne was the father of her child, and she said of her sister's relations with Oliver Osborne.

Miss Dora Tanzer, please look at the man in the man's inquired Benjamin Slade.

"That's the man," she answered.

But a sister gave essentially the same testimony before the grand jury in the earlier stages of the case. She confessed that she had got a date in November wrong and had mixed up Thanksgiving and Christmas. She denied that she had lied to her sister Helen when looking at James W. Osborne before United States Commissioner Houston. "Good God, it isn't the man!"

The trial will be resumed this morning.

ELON R. BROWN TO ASSIST

Will Help Defend the State Reapportionment Act.

ABRANT, June 29.—Senator Elon R. Brown of Watertown, Republican leader in the Senate, has been designated by Attorney General Coughlin to assist Deputy Attorney-General William E. Lewis in defending the reapportionment act of the last Legislature against the proceedings instituted in New York to test the constitutionality of the law making the new Senate and Assembly districts.

During the last session the Democratic members of the Legislature served notice of their intention to file a writ of prohibition that would not give New York a larger representation. The present action was brought by William A. McQuade on the basis of declarations by Robert M. Dowling, John J. Repper, Lawrence M. D. McGuire and John R. Voorhees that the reapportionment is unfair and unconstitutional.

The case is in order to show cause why the reapportionment should not be declared void is set before the Court of Appeals on Friday.

LAUNCH RUN DOWN—2 DROWN

Three Rescued When Kill Von Kul

Bent Is Cut In Half.

between Mariners Harbor and Shooter Island on the Kill van Kull lost their lives last night when the little craft was run down by the lighter industry and cut in half.

Frederick Rohd and Frederick Weber, both employees of the Tracy Towing Company and both living in Perth Amboy, were the two drowned. Mary Lunn Frank McNally and Lloyd Ekert were saved by the crew of the tug Doctory.

which was coming up the hill as the crash occurred. Two boats of Harbor Squad A had been in use up until the late hour last night to recover the bodies. It is believed the strong tide carried them out to sea.

The Allied Bazaar ends to-night in blaze of glory, with the cause of the wounded soldiers $1,500,000 to the good. The directors, Waldemar de Bille and George Hough Poyer, say the exact results will not be known for several weeks, but it is certain that since the doors opened June 3 the market set for $1,000,000, has been exceeded by more than one-half. To-day four great auction stands will be put up on the main floor, and several others on the upper floors, and all the remaining articles will be knocked down at whatever prices the crowds will give.

The event last night was a costume which was transformed into a Latin Quarter, and filled with a motley throng of Apaches, Parisian dandies, art students and the like, had been arranged.

Early in the afternoon placards were posted on the two lower floors of the Grand Central Palace saying the members of the Zoefligel and the Prodic companies would attend the ball. The placards mysteriously disappeared from the great distress of Mrs. Benjamin Franklin, who had been the belle of the room. Meanwhile, George A. Brown and Mrs. Valentine Webster, heads of the Blind Fund Theatre Aerie, protested against the Zoefligel and Prodic companies. The Follies girls were going to the ball, Mr. Kessler declared that the visit the Follies had promised to make to the Theatre was cancelled, and that they would only come to the bazaar. The air was decidedly murky all day, but Constantine Collier fixed up some more placards and the Zoefligel and Prodic companies did attend the ball. To-night at 8 they will perform for Mr. Kessler.

tion is that as we go along we notice marked improvement. The trade is meeting us very satisfactorily. We meet very much better conditions from day to day."
